Gender Generation and Identity in Contemporary Russia

The authors draw on the growing literature on gender and generation in the West which has arisen as a result of the recognition that the experience of youth is classed, raced and gendered and that the experience of gender is mediated by class, race, ethnicity, sexuality and age. They consider the role of the media, state and social institutions in shaping opportunities and experiences in the Pilkington concludes that at least with these new gender stereo-types the exploitation is more out in the open: 'the gloves are off' as she puts it. According to some of the contributors, the 'new woman' sometimes suffers from a 'masculinity complex' by which she expects to manage everything - success in the labour market as well as bringing up children in the home and fulfilling new ideals of glamour.
